IN FORGOTTEN GRAVE

Sleeps a Brave Irish Soldier of The Revolution at Lafayette.

Capt. J. Sullenger, one of the revolutionary soldiers buried in Christian county, was an Irishman who lived to a great age and died at Lafayette, where he is buried in an old grave yard that has been taken charge of by the negroes and his grave is surrounded by those of the colored population. It is unmarked by any sort of headstone, and only a few of the older people know where the grave is.
The brave old soldier has no descendants in this part of the country; if he left any anywhere no one here knows of them. At least one citizen of Lafayette, the venerable Wm.
White, remembers when the old man died about 70 years ago.

EDWARD ELLIOT

At Tabernacle Next Monday Night, March 18.

Mr. Elliot inaugurates his twentieth year in his art. He takes some play that has been a great success and credit to the stage, arranges it into a concise story told by the characters. These characters are acted out, made real living people. You are made to see the play as vividly almost as though acted out by the company of players.

BAINBRIDGE MAN

Went On Warpath And Shot Three Men With Shotgun.

Three men were shot Wednesday afternoon near Bainbridge by R. W.
Pollard, a farmer of that vicinity.
The men shot were J. D. Cluck, his son-in-law, James Cluck, his grandson, and a young man named Robert Martin.

The trouble arose from the fact that some of Pollard's sheep had been killed by dogs and Pollard claimed that the dogs belonged to a brother of J. D. Cluck. A dispute followed and Pollard secured a shotgun and going to where Cluck and the boys were at work, shot at Cluck. The boys were so close to him that scattering shot hit all three of them. Cluck got two shot in his body and several in his legs. One of the boys was hit by a dozen shot in his legs. The wounds are not dangerous.

Pollard left going in the direction of the Caldwell county line. Sheriff Johnson was notified and went down Thursday to look for him but he could not be found.
